Significant Dealing

A significant dealing, is a dealing with a client which falls outside of the provisions of a TMD for a particular product. Issuers to report to ASIC when they become aware of a significant dealing regarding their financial products.

Whether a dealing is 'significant' is a matter for the issuer and/or distributor to determine, given the particular circumstances around the dealing.

RG 274 outlines factors that may be considered in determining whether a significant dealing exists, including:

- ▶ the proportion of consumers involved in the dealing, who don't align with the TMD;
- ▶ the actual or potential harm to investors involved in the dealing, including any amount of loss;
- ▶ the nature and extent that the distribution is inconsistent with the TMD.

To assist the identification of Significant Dealings, an issuer may set out the kinds of dealings they consider significant, and therefore reportable, in the TMD. Accordingly, OpenInvest has given consideration to the nature of the products described in this TMD and determines that a significant dealing will arise in circumstances where an investor is found to:

1. not be at least 18 years of age; and/or
2. not be an Australian Resident for tax purposes; and/or
3. require a level of capital liquidity that is not achieved by the standard 5-10 business day timeframe required to release funds from investments held in the relevant product(s).

Monitoring and oversight of these circumstances will be achieved through automated system reporting, sample testing and the handling of customer complaints.

Distributors must report to OpenInvest using one of the following methods:
